

OCT – 7 2008

The Honorable John Dingell
Chairman
Committee on Energy and Commerce
U. S. House of Representatives
Washington, DC 20515

Dear Chairman Dingell:

Thank you for your letter of September 26, 2008, expressing your concern that consumers living in the U.S.-Mexican border areas are informed about the digital transition and that they take full advantage of the assistance offered to U.S. households through the TV Converter Box Coupon Program (Coupon Program). I share these concerns and welcome the opportunity to inform you of the efforts being undertaken by the National Telecommunications and Information Administration (NTIA) and the Coupon Program to address the needs of these communities.

The Coupon Program's consumer education efforts have been aimed squarely at communities – such as those on the U.S.-Mexico border – that rely disproportionately on over-the-air reception of television services. In order to gauge the success of these efforts, every Monday, Coupon Program staff reviews coupon participation and redemption data for the prior week to analyze the extent to which we are succeeding in reaching these target communities. Informed by that data, we make adjustments to our consumer education strategies to ensure that our resources continue to target those most in need.

To augment its outreach to at-risk communities, and in response to lessons learned in the Wilmington, North Carolina test pilot, NTIA recently initiated a new campaign called "Apply, Buy and Try." This campaign is intended to increase the urgency of our messaging to ensure that consumers act now to order coupons, purchase the converter box soon after receiving their coupons, and connect it to their analog television(s) to ensure they are getting good reception and to work out any technical issues prior to the transition.

These efforts appear to be succeeding. I am very pleased that awareness of the transition and the Coupon Program – as measured by household participation in the Coupon Program (i.e., requests for coupons) – is among the highest in Designated Market Areas (DMAs) along the U.S.-Mexico border. Indeed, the Texas border DMAs – Harlingen-McAllen-Brownsville; Laredo; and El Paso – occupy three of the top four spots, respectively, with Yuma-El Centro, California and San Antonio both in the top 35 markets based on household participation. In DMAs where participation is lower, including those along the U.S.-Mexico border, such as San Diego and Odessa-Midland, NTIA is increasing its consumer education and outreach efforts. Additionally, according to a September 16, 2008, Government Accountability Office report, areas with a high concentration of Latino or Hispanic households had noticeably higher coupon request rates (28 percent) when compared to areas with predominately non-Latino or non-Hispanic households (12 percent). NTIA's partners, especially Univision and other Spanish language broadcasters, as well as community organizations such as the National Council of La Raza, have contributed greatly to outreach efforts along the border. I have enclosed for your information Coupon Program data for U.S.-Mexico border communities, as well as a list of public events and other outreach conducted by NTIA and the Coupon Program, as well as Secretary Gutierrez, that is focused on these areas.

Thank you again for your thoughtful letter. While there is much more that needs to be done, I believe we are making meaningful progress toward our shared goal of ensuring that U.S. households along the U.S.-Mexico border are prepared for the digital transition by February 17, 2009.

Sincerely,

Meredith Attwell Baker
Acting Assistant Secretary
for Communications and Information
