Inglis to discuss issues with residents at seven meetings

U.S. Rep. Bob Inglis, R-SC, is inviting local residents to meet and talk about issues.

A spokesman for Inglis said in a prepared statement that seven "town hall" meetings are planned throughout the Fourth Congressional District, beginning Wednesday in Simpsonville and Thursday in Greenville.

Inglis will also be making door-to-door visits in nearby neighborhoods, spokesman Price Atkinson said.

The scheduled meetings will include Friday at Greer CPW Break Room at 301 McCall St., Greer; and Monday, July 31, at the Woodruff Community Center, 550 Cavins Road, Woodruff.

Next month, Inglis will be at the Spartanburg Public Libraries Headquarters, 151 S. Church St., Spartanburg, on Tuesday, Aug. 1; at the Inman Fire Department, 6 N. Humphries St., Inman, on Wednesday, Aug. 2; and at the USC Union Community Room, 309 E. Academy St., Union, on Thursday, Aug. 3.

All meetings are scheduled for 7 p.m.

Atkinson said residents are asked to come out and discuss what is on their minds.

The invitation stems from Congress working through several hot issues this spring and summer like immigration, the war in Iraq, the global war on terror and social issues, Atkinson said.
