

House Republicans

REAL ENERGY SOLUTIONS

The Daily Fact Sheet: August 21, 2008

- As a new round of polling shows continued strong support from the American people for increased American energy production to lower gas prices, House Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) is still refusing to allow a straight up-or-down vote on the House GOP's "all of the above" plan to lower prices at the pump. The plan, introduced as the American Energy Act (H.R. 6566), would lower gas prices by increasing production of American energy, promoting more conservation and efficiency, and encouraging the use of more alternative and renewable fuels.
- Not only does this morning's New York Times report that 62 percent of respondents to a fresh poll sponsored by the newspaper and CBS News favor increased energy production far off our nation's shores, but a story in today's Wall Street Journal titled "Voters Want Everything on Energy" highlights new polling the newspaper has conducted with NBC News. The results indicate strong support for the House Republicans' "all of the above" strategy for energy independence.
- While the Speaker ducks and dodges straightforward questions on the "all of the above" strategy Americans solidly support to bring down the price at the pump, House Republicans continue their historic nationwide gas prices protest on the floor of the U.S. House and in communities across the country. Poised to wrap-up its third full week, the unprecedented revolt is making waves with news outlets from coast to coast and giving a voice to Americans fed up with a Democratic Congress that blocked a vote on a comprehensive plan to lower gas prices before leaving Washington for a five-week break. How much longer will Speaker Pelosi continue to ignore families, seniors, and small businesses by refusing to allow a vote on the “all of the above” plan they support and expect?
