HISTORY

In 1774, the Continental Congress chose Episcopal Rector Jacob Duché to open its legislative sessions with prayer. In 1789, the First Congress chose Reverend William Lynn, a Presbyterian from Philadelphia, as the official chaplain of the House of Representatives. Each succeeding Congress has named a Chaplain, except between the years 1855–1861, when local clergy served as volunteer chaplains. In the 20th century, the average tenure of House Chaplains was 21 years. In recent Supreme Court decisions, the constitutionality of the Chaplain's role has been upheld based on precedent and tradition.

"I have lived, Sir, a long time, and the longer I live, the more convincing proofs I see of this truth: that God Governs in the affairs of men. And if a sparrow cannot fall to the ground without his notice, is it probable that an empire can rise without his aid? We have been assured, Sir, in the sacred writings, that 'except the Lord build the House they labour in vain that build it.' I firmly believe this; and I also believe that without his concurring aid we shall succeed in this political building no better, than the Builders of Babel . . . I therefore beg leave to move—that henceforth prayers imploring the assistance of Heaven, and its blessings on our deliberations, be held in this Assembly every morning before we proceed to business, and that one or more of the Clergy of this City be requested to officiate in that Service."

Benjamin Franklin, June 28, 1787

MINISTRIES OF PRAYER

The Opening Prayer

Each session of Congress opens with prayer. It is a great honor and responsibility for the Chaplain to keep the tradition of prayer alive in Congress. Each opening prayer asks God's blessing on the nation and the work of the House of Representatives. The invitation to pray is extended beyond those gathered in the House Chamber to people everywhere over C-SPAN. Hopefully, new life is given to the words engraved above the Speaker's chair: "In God We Trust," and people no matter what their faith persuasion can respond, "Amen."

Prayer for Special Events

Prayer is often part of Congressional events which occur on Capitol Hill. These formal or informal ceremonies can mark historical commemorations, special congressional award ceremonies, and dedications of memorials. Prayer adds a solemnity and dignity to such secular celebrations.

Intercessory Prayer

The Chaplain welcomes requests from Members of Congress and staff to offer their personal intentions in prayer. He also welcomes and appreciates the prayers of the general public for Members and their families and for all those who work on Capitol Hill.

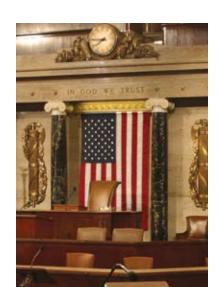

Prayer Groups

Small groups of Members of Congress, spouses, and staff gather for Bible study, prayerful reflection, or spiritual discernment. When the House is in session, Members are invited to attend a non-denominational prayer breakfast. Particular staff associations for Muslims, Jewish, and Christians have formed to call one another together for holy days and for regular times of prayer and fellowship.

Congressional Prayer Room

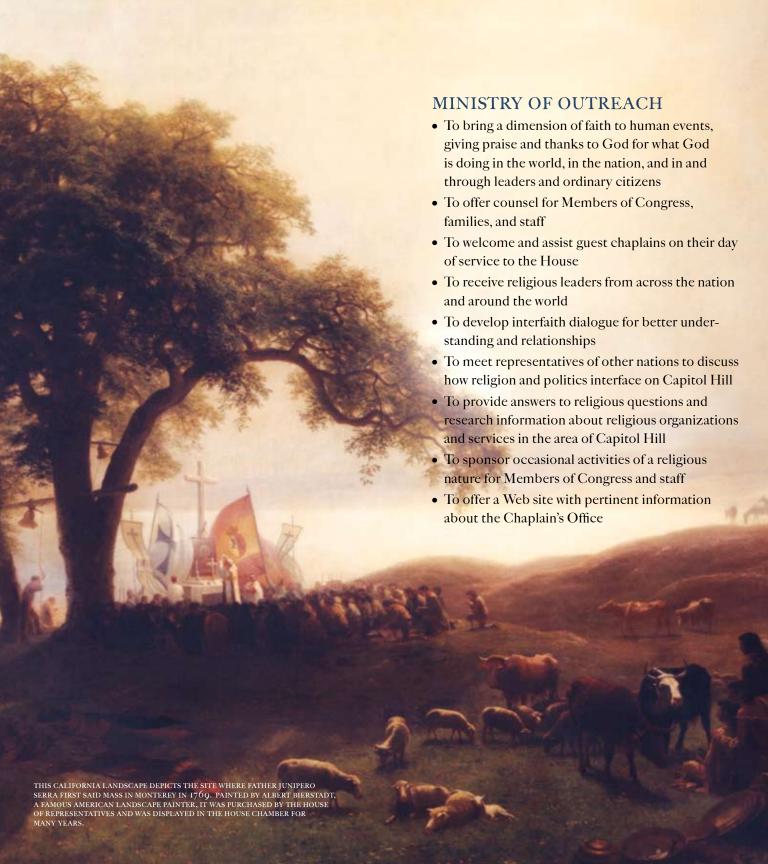

Since 1955, a small room in the center of the Capitol just off the Rotunda has been set aside exclusively for Members of Congress to use for communal prayer and study or private prayerful reflection.

The room itself is a statement of the preeminence of prayer both in our history and in our ongoing life as a nation. Dominated by the figure of George Washington praying Psalm 16, surrounded by the names of the each State of the Union, the lighted stained glass window creates an atmosphere of peaceful serenity in the midst of a busy world of visitors and the work of government.

PASTORAL MINISTRY

The Chaplain makes himself available to all who work for or in the House of Representatives. Pastoral care is offered to anyone in need of encouragement, the inspiration of Scripture, helpful guidance, or personal counsel.

His pastoral care primarily focuses on current Members of the House, but can include their families and staff, former Members of Congress, teenage pages, Capitol Police, and other congressional employees. These encounters are held in strictest confidence.

As persons deal with the demands of a difficult job or face illness, at grieving moments of death or disappointment, in preparation for marriage or a major adjustment in family life, they often seek out the Chaplain.

The Chaplain believes people worship in their own way and usually at the times they decide, but God moves and acts in any of us as God wills. The Chaplain hopes to be present to facilitate such encounters and prays that he is a support but never an obstacle to anyone's search for faith.

REV. DANIEL P. COUGHLIN

Father Daniel Coughlin was born to Daniel and Lucille Coughlin on November 8, 1934. Raised on the north side of Chicago, he participated in the Catholic school system and was ordained a priest for the Archdiocese in 1960 with a Licentiate in Sacred Theology. He served as a priest at St. Raymond's parish in Mount Prospect, Illinois, and at Holy Name Cathedral in downtown Chicago. In 1968, Father Coughlin received a Master's Degree in pastoral studies from Loyola University. During the following year, he was appointed the first director of the Office for Divine Worship by Cardinal John Patrick Cody. By investing himself in the renewal of prayer and the Church's liturgy with the diverse parishes of Chicago, he was drawn into ecumenical relationships and was given a national and international perspective as Roman Catholics moved from Latin to sacramental worship in the vernacular languages.

In 1984, a year-long sabbatical provided Father Coughlin a three-fold blessing. Spending over five months in the monastic setting of Gethsemani Abbey helped him deepen a contemplative way of approaching prayer and life. This was followed by months of a comparative study in Eastern and Western prayer forms at the University of San Francisco. During the fall of that year, he lived with the members of Mother Teresa's community, the Missionaries of Charity, and worked with the poorest of the poor in Calcutta, India.

After spending time the following year at the Pontifical North American College in Rome as scholar-in-residence, he returned to parochial life at St. Francis Xavier parish in La Grange, Illinois.

In 1990, Cardinal Joseph Bernardin appointed Father Coughlin the director of the Cardinal Stritch Retreat House in Mundelein, Illinois, where retreats and spiritual direction and leadership programs for priests and lay persons became his focus of ministry in Chicago and other places. Working as Vicar of Priests for Cardinal Bernardin in 1995 and later under Cardinal Francis George, he worked with brother priests on personnel issues.

While doing this pastoral work with those in public ministry he was interviewed by the staff of J. Dennis Hastert, Speaker of the House, on March 13, 2000. Ten days later, on March 23, 2000, Father Coughlin was sworn in as the fifty-ninth Chaplain of the U.S. House of Representatives. Since then, he has kept prayer alive in the opening sessions of Congress and established personal and pastoral relationships with Members of Congress and staff. Concerned about their spiritual growth, ethical standards, professional performance of duties, and development of personal gifts and character, the Chaplain makes every effort to be present to people on Capitol Hill especially in times of crisis.

Since becoming the first Catholic to serve as Chaplain of the U.S. House of Representatives, Father Coughlin has received the Distinguished Service Award from Washington Theological Union, the Alumni Extraordinary Service Award from the Institute of Pastoral Studies at Loyola University, and an Honorary Doctorate in Theology from Lewis University.
