

U.S. Department of Homeland Security Federal Emergency Management Agency Legislative Affairs Division

Telephone: 202-646-4500 Fax: 202-646-3600

FEMA CONGRESSIONAL ADVISORY

FEMA URGES RESIDENTS TO GET READY FOR HURRICANE SEASON

April 29, 2010

With just over a month until the beginning of the 2010 Atlantic hurricane season on June 1, the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) urges Americans to ensure their families, homes and businesses are prepared for the risks associated with hurricanes and tropical storms. Individuals and families are encouraged to have a family communications plan and get a kit with essential items like non-perishable food, bottled water, spare batteries, a can opener and specialty items like spare eyeglasses.

As hurricanes and tropical storms move inland, the high winds are often accompanied by torrential rains that increase the likelihood of flooding. Residents should know their risks, now, and invest in flood insurance to protect their homes and property. There is typically a 30 day waiting period before a policy takes effect, so the time to act is now

"As hurricane season approaches, FEMA is coordinating with state and local officials to ensure that all communities along the coast are prepared to respond," said FEMA Administrator Craig Fugate. "But we can only be as prepared as the public, and so it's important that everyone take steps now to help keep their family safe in the event of a hurricane or other emergency. These steps include making a family communications plan, putting together an emergency kit, staying informed of risks and weather forecasts in your area, and considering flood insurance."

Flood insurance is available through approximately 85 insurance companies in more than 20,800 participating communities nationwide. Most everyone can purchase flood insurance - including renters, business owners and homeowners. Flood insurance is also affordable, with policies starting at $119 a year. Individuals can learn more about their flood risk and flood insurance options by visiting www.FloodSmart.gov or calling 1-800-427-2419.

To learn what you can do to prepare for hurricane season, visit www.Ready.gov. FEMA also recently launched a mobile version of its Web site, making it easier to access critical information regarding emergency preparedness and what to do before and after a disaster from a smartphone. The site can be accessed at m.fema.gov.

To learn about your flood risk, visit www.FloodSmart.gov.

If you have any questions, please contact FEMA's Legislative Affairs Division at (202) 646-4500.

FEMA's mission is to support our citizens and first responders to ensure that as a nation we work together to build, sustain, and improve our capability to prepare for, protect against, respond to, recover from, and mitigate all hazards.