

HOW WOULD YOU VOTE

Job creation is at the forefront of the minds of every American. Currently Congress has two prevailing views on how to achieve that goal. The Democrat majority has taken the road of infusing massive amounts of taxpayer dollars into the economy, while Republicans contend that lowering taxes on business investment and income, repealing the capital gains tax, and creating a long term predictable environment in which businesses can operate is the right approach. In your own words, what direction should Congress take to best promote job creation in the near, and long term:

The current Administration and Democrat majority have taken extreme efforts to stem human caused global climate change. Currently there are immense amounts of science supporting both sides of this issue. Given that human caused global climate change is clearly not a settled science, and that there are now alleged improprieties on behalf climatologists asserting its existence, do you feel that it is appropriate for Congress to take action (i.e. Cap and Trade) on the issue at this time?
