Project Information

Name of Project: Readiness Center – Guam National Guard

Project Description: It is expected that this project will be programmed in the Future Years Defense Program (FYDP) for Army National Guard Military Construction. The Readiness Center is needed to serve the peace-time and homeland defense missions of the 909th and 910th Quartermaster detachments of the Guam Army National Guard. Currently, the 909th and 910th Quartermaster detachments are located and co-located at Fort Juan Muna in inadequate and substandard facilities. The existing readiness facility was built in the early 1990s to only support the 909th detachment. Transformation and expansion of the Guam Army National Guard coupled with increased OPEMPO as a result of OIF and OEF operations has rendered the facility inadequate to satisfy the current readiness requirements of the detachments. Additionally, the existing facility is unable to support the MTO&E equipment authorizations for the detachments. The planned readiness center would be centralized and located at the Guam National Guard Barrigada Complex in Barrigada, Guam, thereby meeting force protection and optimal unit readiness requirements.
