Resolution directing the Secretary of Homeland Security to transmit to the House of Representatives certain information relating to the Department of Homeland Security's planning, information sharing, and coordination with any State or locality receiving detainees held at Naval Station, Guantanamo Bay, Cuba on or after January 20, 2009.

PURPOSE AND SUMMARY

The purpose of H. Res. 922 is to provide for submission to the House of Representatives by the Secretary of Homeland Security certain information relating to the Department of Homeland Security's planning, information sharing, and coordination with any State or locality receiving detainees held at Naval Station, Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, on or after January 20, 2009.

BACKGROUND AND NEED FOR LEGISLATION

In 2001, President George W. Bush, pursuant to congressional authorization to use of "all necessary and appropriate force" against those responsible for the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001, ordered that suspected Al Qaeda and Taliban members be detained at several locations, including the U.S. Naval Station at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. Today, there are about 215 detainees being held at Guantanamo Bay. Some of the detainees, such as the Uighurs, a Turkic Muslim minority group from China, have not been transferred to their country of origin because of national security or human rights concerns and other countries have been unreceptive to accepting detainees.

On January 27, 2009, President Barack Obama issued Executive Order 13492, Review and Disposition of Individuals Detained at the Guantanamo Bay Naval Base and Closure of Detention Facilities, which requires that the detention facility be "promptly" closed no later than January 22, 2010 "in order to effect the appropriate disposition of" Guantanamo Bay detainees. Executive Order 13492 also ordered an immediate review of each detainee's status and temporarily halted all proceedings before military commissions. President Obama also issued Executive Order 13493, Review of Detention Policy Options, that established the Special Task Force on Detainee Disposition, tasked with "identif[ying] lawful options" for the disposition of Guantanamo Bay detainees and others captured by the United States. The Secretary of Homeland Security is identified as a participant in the interagency review ordered in Executive Order 13492 and a member of the Special Task Force on Detainee Disposition established under Executive Order 13493.

Members of the Committee on Homeland Security have an interest in ensuring that there is proper notification to the Governors of States that will be recipients of detainees that are transferred from Guantanamo Bay. For this reason, Chairman Thompson offered, and a majority of Committee Members approved, an amendment in the nature of a substitute to amend H. Res. 922 to require the Secretary of Homeland Security to transmit copies of all notifications within 14 days of adoption of the resolution.
