

Martha Roherty is the Executive Director of the National Association of States United for Aging and Disabilities (NASUAD). She and her staff educate Congress, the Administration, advocacy groups, and the public on administrative, health, and social policy issues of concern to state officials. Prior to joining NASUAD, Ms. Roherty was director of the National Association of State Medicaid Directors.

National Association of States United for Aging and Disabilities

NASUAD represents the nation's 56 state and territorial agencies on aging and disabilities and supports visionary state leadership, the advancement of state systems innovation and the articulation of national policies that support home and community based services for older adults and individuals with disabilities. NASUAD's mission is to advance social, health and economic policies responsive to the needs of a diverse aging population and to enhance the capacity of its membership to promote the rights, dignity and independence of, and expand the opportunities and resources for, current and future generations of older persons, adults with disabilities and their families. NASUAD is the articulating force at the national level through which state agencies on aging join together to promote social policy in the public and private sectors responsive to the challenges and opportunities of an aging America.
