Suspension of Rules in the House: Measure Sponsorship by Party

Thomas P. CarrAnalyst in American National GovernmentGovernment and Finance Division

Summary

From the $100^{\text {th }}$ through the $105^{\text {th }}$ Congresses (1987-1998), the House of Representatives acted on measures through a motion to suspend the rules an average of 549 times per Congress. Measures so acted on were sponsored by Members of the minority party, on average, $17.3 \%$ of the time ( $15.9 \%$ if sponsors of House measures only are counted). Figures for the $106^{\text {th }}$ through the $108^{\text {th }}$ Congresses, are significantly above these averages.

Measures Sponsored by Members of Each Party Acted on by Suspension of the Rules in the House

During the past decade, the House of Representatives has made frequent use of its procedure for acting expeditiously on measures through a motion to suspend the rules. The procedure is regarded as well adapted for this purpose, because it limits debate to 40 minutes, permits no floor amendments, and requires two-thirds of Members present and voting (a quorum being present) to pass the measure. ${ }^{1}$

The procedure is frequently used for measures not involving great complexity or controversy. It is most commonly used for initial House action on measures, in the form of a motion to suspend the rules and pass a bill, or to suspend the rules and adopt a joint, concurrent, or House resolution. Suspension of the rules is sometimes also used for action to resolve differences with the Senate, in the form of a motion to suspend the rules and concur with Senate amendments (either with or without further amendment) or, occasionally, to suspend the rules and adopt a conference report. This report examines all action by suspension of the rules, whether for initial passage or final action. It also includes all motions to suspend the rules, whether or not the motions were adopted.

[^0]The two tables that follow present data on the number of times measures were acted on by suspension of the rules in the House of Representatives during the $100^{\text {th }}$ through the $108^{\text {th }}$ Congress. Table 1 provides the number and percent of such measures originally sponsored by members of each party. It includes action on both House and Senate measures, with Senate measures counted under the party of their Senate sponsor. Table $\mathbf{2}$ offers similar information for only those measures introduced by House Members. The data for the $100^{\text {th }}$ through the $105^{\text {th }}$ Congresses were obtained through the legislative status data bases maintained by LEGI-SLATE. ${ }^{2}$ Data for the $106^{\text {th }}$ through the $108^{\text {th }}$ Congresses were compiled using the Legislative Information System (LIS).
