The Daily Quote

"Grover, I said, would be irrelevant in two years, and I say that he's got another year-and-a-half to go,' [Former Senator Alan] Simpson said of the Americans for Tax Reform leader on MSNBC's 'Andrea Mitchell Reports.' 'He will be irrelevant. This guy is a zealot, a zealot is one who having forgotten his purposes, redoubles his efforts. And he sees the crumbling of the great house of cards.'... Simpson added, 'He is becoming irrelevant. You can see it in his eyes. He knows the game is up because good people, of good faith, have decided instead of being Republicans or Democrats, they're Americans. Instead of being beholden to Grover Norquist and the AARP, they're beholden to the United States of America. Those guys are going to take their lumps.'"
