The dude in the shades is Dolphins quarterback Dan Marino, handing out smokes on the charter bound for Super Bowl XIX against the 49ers in Palo Alto, Calif. [That's backup quarterback Don Strock with the cutting-edge video camera.] Miami would lose that 1985 game 38-16 despite Marino's 318 passing yards, but it was only his second NFL season, so he had plenty of time left in a career that would land him next to Namath and Bradshaw in Canton. Though the Dolphins made the playoffs in 10 of Marino's 17 seasons, they never did get back to the Super Bowl. Close, but no cigar. —S.W.
