

FASHION FORWARD

Though The Hour's Hector (Dominic West, second from left) and Kiki (Hannah Tointon) have a polished period style like the folks at Sterling Cooper Draper Pryce, "the characters in Mad Men probably have more money," says costume designer Suzanne Cave.

THE HOUR THE BBC AMERICA DRAMA DOES 1950S GLAMOUR, LONDON-STYLE

Costume designer Suzanne Cave helps re-create the golden age of British TV for The Hour (Wednesdays at 9 p.m. on BBC America). "There wasn't a major fashion revolution occurring in the late '50s," says Cave. "But in season 2, everything is definitely edging toward the '60s." —NAKISHA WILLIAMS

THOSE FEMININE CHARMS

"[We rent] the costume jewelry from Sophie Millard, a small business run by a husband and wife," says Cave. Vintage intimates such as pointy bras and corsets "create that hourglass shape, like what your grandmother would have worn."

IN THE MODE

"Primarily, my source of research for season 2 was periodicals of the time, like the U.K. editions of Vogue and Harper's Bazaar," says Cave, who used mood boards to capture each character's aesthetic. "We exaggerate the colors and shapes to lift the visual impact."

HAPPY HOSTESS

"Her outfits are like a coordinated vision. We referenced classical beauties like Grace Kelly and Suzy Parker," Cave says of Marni (Oona Chaplin).
