

Shake It Up, Baby!

The Beatles' manager Brian Epstein (with McCartney in New York, 1964) sports a wig modeled after the band's famous mop-tops. Though Starr's picture is out of focus, he says, "It didn't have to be clear to capture the moment. I love that shot." Below, Lennon enjoys a quiet moment at a Paris hotel in 1964. Notes Starr: "That's a nice shot of John."

A Starr Is Born

Though his birth name is Richard Starkey, the drummer has said he took the name Ringo Starr because it sounded "cowboyish." Above: Starr horses around with his stepfather Harry Graves and mother, Elsie, at his home in Liverpool, England, ca. 1958. "This picture blows me away," Starr writes. Right: McCartney, Starr, fellow Liverpool musician and pal William Faron Ruffley, Harrison and an unidentified woman hang out backstage at the Tower Ballroom in New Brighton, England, in 1961.
