Dear Friend,

It's no secret Abraham Lincoln began life humbly and worked his way up the social and economic ladder by discipline, perseverance and force of will, and believed others could do the same given the freedom and basic means to do so.

In short, Lincoln believed in the American Dream. He thought it was our birthright as Americans. It's why the robbery of slavery was so reprehensible to him.

Today, on his 207th birthday, I stood in front of the "Lincoln Wall" in your office in Washington to renew a powerful call he made during the Civil War:
