SAN JOSE, Calif., Nov. 10.—A ransom of $40,000 was demanded by Alexander J. Hart, a wealthy merchant, for the return of his 22-year-old son, Errol Hart, the object of a State-wide hunt as a kidnaping victim.

An anonymous telephone caller said that the money must be paid "if you want to see your boy alive again," but gave no instructions as to the manner of payment.

Department of Justice Agents, the police of San Francisco and San Jose and police officers of the entire bay district united in the hunt a few hours after the disappearance of young Hart after he left the department store in which he recently had been made a partner with his father.

San Jose police questioned Tony Esposito, 22, said to be an underworld character, but released him after several hours of examination. Search of the Calaveras Desert area, twenty-five miles northwest of San Jose, was made in the hope of picking up the trail of the young merchant. His motor car, its engine still burning, was found early today on a road leading to thirty-three miles, in which many deserted cottages are located.

The elder Hart remained silent as to the ransom demands and what his course would be. He received a telephone call from San Francisco four hours after young Hart's disappearance, demanding the ransom. The call was traced to a public booth in a San Francisco hotel, but no one could be found who had seen the caller.

Young Hart, who recently left his studies at Stanford University to become joint partner of his father's store, was seen departing from the store at 6 P. M. yesterday.

Deny Contact With Kidnapers

Family of Brooks Hart and U. S. Agents Both Repudiate Report.

SAN JOSE, Cal., Nov. 11 (A. P.).—Reports that kidnapers had made contacts with members of the A. J. Hart family demanding payment of $40,000 ransom for release of the son, Brooks Hart, 22 years old, were vehemently denied by all investigators and members of the family today.

Rod Vetterl, San Francisco head of the Bureau of Investigation, Department of Justice, said late tonight:

"Up to the time I left the Hart home a few minutes ago there had been no contact whatsoever with the abductors of Brooks Hart. If there had been such contact, in any manner, I would know about it."

The father was as emphatic in denial as were Chief of Police J. N. Moore, Sheriff William J. Knig, members of the family and close friends who had been with them all day and evening.

The family communication received at San Jose today was the first since the kidnaping of Brooks Hart on Oct. 27.

At the time the report was received, the father was in the hospital. He was written home and told of the ransom demand. He added that he had no way of knowing if the report was true or not.

When I went to the hospital, the father was told that the kidnapers had demanded $40,000 ransom for the release of Brooks Hart.

Two Clues Fail In Hart Kidnaping

Mystery Shrouds Abduction of California Youth.

San Jose, Calif., Nov. 13 (AP). What authorities had regarded as two clues to the apparent kidnaping of Brooks Hart, 21, son of a wealthy San Jose merchant, vanished today, leaving the case as much of a mystery as it was last Thursday night when the youth disappeared.

Disclosure was made that the Hart family had received a telephone from Sacramento suggesting $25,000 be offered as a compromise ransom to meet the original demand for $40,000 upon Alexander Hart, the father, a few hours after the boy disappeared.

Check-up revealed the telegram was sent by James Meakin, a friend of the Hart family, who said he believed seen an offer would come return of the youth.

The second clue exploded in Oakland, where police arrested Burr W. Poole, printer, who admitted writing the note and making the telephone call. He said he had been drinking and thought it would be "a good joke."

SAN JOSE, Cal., Nov. 13 (U.P.)—Department of Justice agents today announced that they expected a "break" in the mysterious Brooks L. Hart kidnaping case "within a few hours."

Refusing to reveal upon what grounds or information they base their expectations, the Government men insisted that "this case will break open right away."

Ransom Available Today
Chief of Police J. H. Mack was of the same opinion, but stated that he based his belief on the fact that for the first time since Friday the banks will be open, so that Alexander J. Hart, wealthy department store owner and father of the missing 27-year-old Brooks, can obtain in cash the $40,000 ransom which has been demanded.

Case Fumbles Police
Captain of Inspectors Charles Dulica, of San Francisco declared the case has several circumstances which make it a puzzle. He said:

"The only definite clue we have so far, is the finding of the Hart boy's wallet on the guard rail of the all-tanker Midway Friday after she had loaded the liner Lurline at pier 22. That means, of course, that either young Hart was at that pier after his disappearance Thursday night, or some one was there who had the last actual contact with him."

Liner Is Combed
Authorities believe the wallet had been tossed from the Lurline, which was searched thoroughly when she docked at Los Angeles Harbor Saturday morning. Two San Francisco detectives, a United States Department of Justice investigator, and a former friend went to Los Angeles by airplane to help Southern California authorities and ship's officers make the search.

Youth Held for $40,000 Ransom Hunted on Ship

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 11.— Search for the kidnapers of Brooke Hart, San Jose youth held for $40,000 ransom, centered suddenly today upon the Matson liner Lurline, due at Los Angeles this morning.

The missing man's wallet was discovered lying on the guard rail of an oil tanker which had lain alongside the Lurline yesterday morning between midnight and 5 a. m.

Police believed the wallet had been tossed from a porthole of the liner. They did not believe Hart could have been brought as a captive aboard the Lurline, but declared that either the kidnapers had boarded the ship after leaving him dead or a prisoner with other gang members, or Hart had gone aboard of his own volition.

Aid of Los Angeles police was enlisted to search the ship and its passengers and crew when it docks.

The Lurline left here at 12:30 p. m. yesterday.

ST. PAUL, Nov. 11.—The Tucky gang is tougher and probably more dangerous than the Kelly-Bailey-Miller mob ever was. The government is determined to rid the country of this gang.

That is Assistant Attorney General Keenan's explanation of his participation in the trial of Roger Touhy, youthful chief of Chicago's toughest post-Capone gang, and three associates for the kidnaping last June of William Hamm, Jr., wealthy young St. Paul brewer.

When the trial is resumed Monday, Hamm, the victim of the $100,000 kidnaping here will again be on the stand in Federal Judge Joyce's court as the government's star witness.

HART BOY SLAIN, KIDNAPER SAYS

SAN JOSE, Cal., Nov. 15 (AP) — Brooks Hart, 23-year-old son of Alex Hart, wealthy department store owner, kidnap victim, was murdered by his two abductors and tossed into San Francisco Bay, it was announced here today by Sheriff W. J. Emig.

The kidnaping and murder have been confessed, according to the sheriff. A statement was taken from one of the abductors.

The body has not yet been recovered, the sheriff said. He said Thomas H. Thurman, one of the abductors, confessed that he and J. M. Holmes wired Hart's arms behind him, hit him with a truck and then threw his body in the bay from the San Mateo county bay bridge.

Officers said Thurman admitted Hart was kidnaped for ransom. Thurman, according to Sheriff Emig, confessed that at the time a $40,000 ransom was asked, Hart already had been murdered, according to Emig.

Both Thurman and Holmes are under arrest and will be charged (Continued on Page 2, Col. 5) with kidnaping and murder, according to District Attorney Fred L. Thomas.

Thurman was taken into custody last night as he telephoned from a local garage to the Hart home.

He asked for the slain youth's father, Alex J. Hart, wealthy department store owner, and said he had instructions for the payment of the $40,000 ransom.

As he and the elder Hart were in conversation, the garage number was flashed to the sheriff's office by the telephone company.

Emig rushed to the garage, pulled Thurman from the telephone and took him to his office.

From 8 p. m. until 1 a. m. Thurman denied his guilt. Then he confessed and said his accomplice was Holmes, according to the sheriff.

Holmes was arrested immediately in a San Jose hotel. Thus far he has maintained his innocence.

But Thurman has admitted that the two kidnaped young Hart about 6 p. m. last Thursday drove to the San Mateo Hayward Bridge across San Francisco Bay and there killed their victim by crushing his skull with a truck. The sheriff's announcement asserted.

The asserted slayers then drove directly to San Francisco, where Thurman, from a telephone booth in a hotel, called the Hart residence.

He told Mr. Hart, 19-year-old sister of Brooks Hart, Santa Clara University graduate and vice president of his father's store, that Brooks had been kidnaped and that $40,000 ransom would be demanded.

Kidnapers Demand $40,000 for Missing California Man

San Jose, Cal., Nov. 10.—(AP)—Ransom of $40,000 is demanded of Alexander J. Hart, wealthy merchant, for the return of his 23 year old son, Brooke Hart, the object of a state-wide hunt as a kidnaping victim.

An anonymous telephone caller said the money must be paid "if you want to see your boy alive again," but gave no instructions as to the manner of payment.

One of the most formidable kidnap hunting organizations ever called into action in northern California, was pursuing clues in the case tonight.

Department of Justice agents, the police of San Francisco and San Jose and peace officers of the entire bay district united in the hunt a few hours after the disappearance of young Hart after he left the department store in which he recently had been made a partner with his father.

Qualified and Freed.

San Jose police picked up Tony Barakona, 14, arrested underworld character, for questioning, but released him after several hours of apparently fruitless examination.

San Francisco police said they had no clues, but Captain of Detectives Charles Duffie stated he had "been informed" that the abductors would get in touch with the Hart family some time today and that his force was awaiting such a development.

Search of the Calaveras dam area,

25 miles northeast of here, was made in the hope of picking up the trail of the young merchant. His motor car, its lights still burning, was found early today on a road leading to that district, in which many deserted cottages are located.

Seek to Trace Call.

The elder Hart remained silent as to the ransom demand and what the score would be. He received a telephone call from San Francisco four hours after young Hart's disappearance, demanding the ransom. The call was traced to a public booth in a large San Francisco hotel, but no one could be found who had seen its originator.

Young Hart, who recently left his studies at Santa Clara university to become junior partner of the father, was last seen departing from the store shortly before 6 p. m. yesterday. His failure to return home caused a search to be started. Later the elder Hart received the telephone call.

Associates said young Hart was of regular habits and not particularly fond of the company of girls, although occasionally he had attended college functions with Miss Jane Hammond of Sacramento, a student of San Jose State college.

The missing youth had a brother, Alexander Hart Jr., and two sisters, Ethel and Miriam, all younger than himself.

2 KIDNAPERS ADMIT THEY KILLED HART

Bay Dragged for Victim to Complete Solution of Case; Crowd Threatens Lynching

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 16 (U.S.)—In the murky waters beside the San Mateo-Hayward bridge, police of three counties were grappling tonight for the body of Brooke Hart, kidnaped and murdered San Jose youth.

Only the finding of the body remained to complete the solution of a kidnaping in which the victim was murdered within a few hours after he was taken captive and thrown into the South Bay from the bridge.

BOYS CONFESS

Complete confessions of the crime were today from the murderer, Thomas H. Thurmond, former San Jose oil station attendant, and Jack Holmes, discharged salesman for an oil company.

First, Thurmond and the others admitted that they kidnaped Hart with the intention of killing him first and then endeavoring to trick the Hart family out of $25,000 ransom.

They confessed taking young Hart out to the bridge, tying his hands with balling wire, hitting him over the head with a brick as he screamed for help, and then throwing him into the bay.

They admitted how they later traced the ransom by letter and by telephone. It was while Thurmond was telephoning the Hart home Wednesday night that he was captured by Sheriff Emig. The telephone wire had been tapped and the call was traced. Thurmond led the authorities to Holmes' home in San Jose.

Admitting today Thurmond had done all that he could do to help the kidnapers, Holmes at first denied everything but he finally confessed to the complete story.

Kidnaped Youth Bound And Thrown Into Bay

where grilling of Holmes was continued by Emig. San Francisco police and Reed Vetterli, Department of Justice agent. It was there that Holmes made his confession.

United States Attorney H. H. McPike announced that both men will be indicted by the federal grand jury next Tuesday under the Federal Lindbergh kidnaping law and that the indictments will be held in abeyance while the men are tried for murder in the State courts.

If by any chance they should escape conviction in the State courts, the Federal Government would be in a position to send them to prison for a long term.

As the spot where Hart was murdered is believed to be in Alameda county, the murder trial will probably be held at Oakland.

Thurmond admitted that they had obtained balling wire and bricks several days in advance of the kidnaping with the deliberate purpose of murdering Hart. Thurmond declared that Holmes instigated the plot and induced him to join the scheme.

VERSIONS VARY SLIGHTLY

Holmes' version differed only on the manner of the killing. He insisted that he hit Hart on the jaw and that the youth fell on a brick and was knocked unconscious.

But Thurmond's story left no doubt in the officers' minds that his tale was the true one. Briefly, they relate the kidnaping as follows:

Young Hart was in his roadster leaving a parking station in San Jose. He was en route back to the Hart home to pick up his father and sister. Holmes jumped into Hart's car as it approached Market Street, San Jose. Holmes kept one hand in his pocket as if he concealed a pistol there. Actually, he was unarmed. He ordered Hart to drive toward Milpitas.

Thurmond, meanwhile, sped ahead in Holmes' automobile and drove to Milpitas. When he saw Hart and Holmes pass through Milpitas, Thurmond followed them out along the Evans Road to about seven miles from San Jose. There they forced Hart out of his car and into Holmes' machine. Hart's car, abandoned at that point, was found there the night of the kidnaping.

Now the kidnapers and their captive sped north through Irvington and Alvarado to the Alameda county end of the San Mateo-Hayward bridge. Thurmond said they went about half a mile along the bridge toward San Mateo, but later he and Holmes fixed a spot that was about a mile from the Alameda county shore.

There young Hart was ordered out of the car. Holmes, according to Thurmond, walked around the car so as to come up behind Hart. Before the boy knew what was happening Holmes struck him over the head with one of the bricks obtained in advance by the plotters and carried with them to the kidnap car. Holmes struck him again with the brick and he fell senseless. Then the two took out their balling wire and tied their victim's hands behind him. Together they threw him off the bridge.

Then began the effort to negotiate for ransom.
