

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE
2005 APPROPRIATION LANGUAGE CHANGES

The information provided below describes substantive changes from the FY 2004 Consolidated Appropriations Act. Changes such as new funding levels, changes in the number of motor vehicles, or changes in references to fiscal years are not discussed.

Impact of the 21st Century Department of Justice Authorization Appropriations Act (P.L. 107-273). General authorizations provided in this act permanently provided: 1) authority for accounting for confidential expenditures solely under the certificate of the Attorney General; 2) authority to purchase vehicles for law enforcement purpose without regard to the general purchase price limitation; and 3) designation of construction-related activities such as planning, designing, equipping, renovating, modernizing, remodeling, maintaining, and repairing as part of a general construction authority; the construction-related terms are no longer repeated in the Department’s annual appropriations language, but are included under the general term construction.

Impact of Program Restructuring on Appropriations language. Consistent with Government Performance and Results Act, the FY 2005 budget proposes to streamline its budget account structure to produce a more thematic presentation of both budget and performance information, thereby enhancing the understanding of programs as they relate to performance. The restructuring proposal includes the merger of DOJ construction accounts in its corresponding component operating accounts, for which resources are provided. In addition, the state and local assistance programs are reflected as three appropriations: Justice Assistance, Community Oriented Policing Service, and Crime Victims Fund. The appropriations language for the affected components is restructured to reflect these proposals.

Language is proposed to reinstate the training and technical assistance program as a separate, standalone program and rename it as community policing development initiatives.
